MINNESOTA LINGO

Bauhaus, a German art school famous for its approach to design, which combines aesthetics with everyday function, can be found throughout Minnesota. Minneapolis alone contains many examples, including the First National Bank Tower, the 57-story IDS Center, and the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank. The earliest, and perhaps most famous example of this modernist design in Minnesota is Saint John's Abbey, a Benedictine monastery in Collegeville Township. Built in 1954, the north facade of the building is the largest wall of stained glass in the world, containing 430 colorful hexagons of abstract design.
