MINNESOTA LINGO

The word "spendy" is an old American word that originally meant "spendthrift, or extravagant" but by 1911 the meaning shifted to the current meaning, which refers to an object for sale being more expensive than one thought it would be. Minnesotans, being masters of passive aggression and avoiding conflict, add the qualifier to the beginning in a feeble attempt at not offending anyone. Generally, this expression comes with a pained face, and some kind of noise noting shock or distaste.
